

ANDANDO

ANNUAL REPORT
FY 2021/2022

YEAR IN REVIEW

From Andando and our partner communities in Senegal thank you to the generous donors, businesses, and grant foundations from around the world for helping us to accomplish more than even we thought was possible.

In our agriculture initiative we constructed seven new women's cooperative gardens this year adding over 500 women and their families to the program. These gardens are changing lives in innumerable ways from increasing food security and nutrition, to providing needed income, to literally putting a roof over families' heads. We profiled Racky earlier this year, a single mother of eight who was able to build an entire new home for her family with the money she earned from garden sales.

In our health sector this year we saw the opening of our most remote health post to date in the community of Mbidi in Podor. Located 27 miles from the nearest paved road this post will provide vital access to health services like pre/ post-natal care, a safe and sanitary birthing environment, malnutrition screenings, and vaccinations for over 5,000 people. We are so proud not only to be expanding our health programs but also to be able to bring this lifesaving care to ever more remote and under served communities.

Our microloan program remains a steadfast and crucial component of our work with 200 small loans distributed annually across our two regions to farmers and small business owners. These loans provide vital access to capital in economically depressed areas and are essential to helping our partner communities to lift themselves out of poverty. 100% of our loan recipients this year paid back their loans on time in full underscoring their commitment to being good stewards of this capital so that it can benefit their communities for years to come.

Microloan Recipient, Mamadou Senghor, with his wife and some of the multiple generations that live in their home.

“The funding had a big impact on me and my family. After the harvest we managed to preserve our food (peanuts and millet) until the next winter. Andando supports us at a very important time in the life of the farmer because at this time it is difficult to access financial assistance.”

— Samba Mbaye –
(Farmer and past microloan recipient in Keur Socé)

Continuing in our mission to support all aspects of our partner communities’ development Andando is thrilled to announce the opening of Keur Soce High School in the fall of 2021. With six classrooms completed the school opened with an initial enrollment of 400 students. School administrators expect enrollment to more than double next year and with this in mind Andando will be constructing two additional classrooms along with new latrines to support student health and gender equality.

“When I heard that they were building classes here, specifically for high school, I was so happy. I didn’t want to leave my village [to attend school], I wanted to stay here, I wanted to learn here and succeed here. I love science subjects... I would like to be in a health center like a doctor. I want to help people, to cure people.”

— Fatimata Ba —
(Freshman Keur Soce High School)

During a break between classes, students wave from the second story of Keur Soce High School where six classrooms are completed and fully furnished.

These are only the highlights of a truly banner year for Andando. The totals below show the full scope of our impact and our website contains detailed updates on all our initiatives, including our revolutionary pilot aquaculture program and our tree planting initiative along with more testimonials from our community partners and our dedicated staff. Thank you for continuing to support Andando in our mission to walk with the people of rural Senegal towards a better future.
